ARCHITECT SHOWCASE

BUILDIT Construction

The Surroundings team at the River Shops modernized this coastal living room in Dartmouth, MA.

FROM THE BUILDER: "Great rooms start with great partnerships between the designer and client. It's a collaboration of ideas and trust ensuring that the execution will realize the client's vision. For their waterfront property, our clients wanted a coastal look to complete their living room renovation, and we knew the view was the star. The built-in sofa offers a nautical nod and make a visual statement, while the indoor/outdoor sofa fabric will stand up to the New England summer weather. The dining area facing the original stone fireplace offers intimate seating for two and flexibility when family is in town. With the built-in bar, ottoman, and an ottoman, there is a spot for everyone. We are spoiled to work with such lovely clients and in locations with so much character. It was a pleasure from start to finish."

FROM THE CLIENT: "We were familiar with Surroundings Interior Design in Mattapoisett, MA, and were pleased that they offered furniture we could see and sit in; they even offered the flexibility to customize furniture for our home. Cheryl Sheehy listened to our ideas and merged them with her own unique style to create the most beautiful and functional space we could ever imagine."

DESIGN & DECOR

Cool, Calm & Casual

BUILDIT Construction customized this three-story summer house with aesthetic, function and entertaining in mind.

BY EDELINDA BAPTISTA | PHOTOGRAPHY BY GREG PREMURU

DURING THE HOME DESIGN PROCESS OF THIS recently completed summer home, the southern Maine coastline acted as a refreshing backdrop for Blakey Interior Design. The clients, who had been summering in Ogunquit for years, engaged Blakey during the architectural phase and initially asked them to only design the living room and primary suite. However, the clients and interior design team became such good partners that by the end of the project, they had designed every room throughout the interior.

Working alongside Lindsey Architects and Maine Coast Builders, the mission was to create a beautiful vacation home for the whole family to enjoy. The clients would be regularly joined by their adult children, spouses, grandchildren and pets. Every element of the design had to be thought out to tell the story of a quintessential New England summer by the beach. "To create truly great spaces, it always starts with listening really well. We listened to their goals and asked a lot of intentional questions that led to designed spaces that met their needs both functionally and aesthetically," says Janelle Blakey, principal and owner of Blakey Interior Design. "They desired an open main level where everyone could casually gather at once, so we used that as inspiration when developing the space plans."

The layout for this family summer home is quite different than most. The first floor contains four bedrooms, a laundry room and gym. The main living area on the second floor opens up to a chef's kitchen, walk in pantry, powder room, dining room and breakfast nook. The wine room is another notable room on the second floor, and the deck just outside the dining room leads to the third floor deck via an iron spiral staircase.
