THE FACE OF MOHS SURGERY
Findley Dermatology

Dr. Alyssa Findley, a double board-certified and fellowship-trained Mohs surgeon and dermatologist, is the trained specialist for skin cancer treatment in Rhode Island and Massachusetts. With thousands of successful Mohs procedures to her name, Dr. Findley offers patients the most advanced and effective treatment for various skin cancers.

The Mohs technique, renowned for its exceptional success rate, combines surgical precision, pathological analysis, and reconstructive expertise – all at a single visit. This method not only allows for real-time microscopic examination of the tissue, ensuring the complete removal of cancerous tissue, but it also preserves as much healthy skin as possible. Patients have confidence in the knowledge that their cancer is gone, with the lowest risk of recurrence.

Known for her compassionate and patient-centric approach, Dr. Findley takes pride in forming meaningful connections with those she treats. "That's the joy of this profession. The relationships I build with my patients bring me immense fulfillment," she shares. Throughout surgery, performed under local anesthesia, she provides comfort and conversation, ensuring that her patients feel cared for at every step of their treatment.

Dr. Findley is one of the few regional experts in Mohs surgery for melanoma. Her experience, personalized care and dedication make her the top choice for those considering this procedure.
